A ROUND OF TALK.

20th Century Poetry

The careless man put a careless arm around the waist of a hatless girl, as over the dustless road in a horseless carriage they whirl. Like a leadless bullett from a hammerless gun by smokeless powder driven, they fly to taste the speechless joy by endless union given. Though the only lunch his coinless purse affords them the means, is a tasteless meal of boneless cod with a "side" of stringless beans. He puffs a tobaccoless cigarette, and laughs a mirthless laugh, when papa tries to coax her back by wireless telegraph.

GRADED SCHOOL.—We publish in this issue the official order of court and call for an election to take the sense of the voters of the district on the question of establishing a graded school at this place. The election is called for August 9th next and is for the purpose of electing six school trustees for the district and also to take the sense of the voters as to whether or not they will vote an annual tax for the establishment and maintainance of the school. This is one of the most important movements towards progress and advancement that has ever been made in this community and the proposition should go through without opposition. It has been the experience of other towns where good graded schools have been established that the advent of such a public enterprise marks a new era in the advancement of the business, social and moral interests of the community. Good schools and especially a good public or free school represent a feature in a place that will do more than any other one thing to attract desirable citizens to locate. The building for the school and other details will be discussed later on the first step necessary being to fix the boundary of the district and to get the consent of the voter on the taxy levy. For this purpose the election is called.

WRONG IMPRESSION — Notwithstanding the fact that the matter has been fully explained in these columns several times and the citizens and merchants of the town have endeavored to correct it, a very erroneous impression seems to prevail among some of the residents of the county in regard to the license tax recently imposed on all business houses and professions. The license tax which was put on all merchants doing business in Springfield was imposed simply as a means of increasing the revenue of the town that its public expenses might be met without trouble. An impression has gotten out among the farmers whichinstead of being corrected appears to be growing, that the farmer cannot sell any of the produce of his farm in town without paying a license. Nothing was ever farther from the truth. The ordinance as passed and published contains this paragraph on that point "This license tax shall not apply to agents or jobbers manufacturers or wholesale dealers who sell to merchants, nor to farmers or gardeners who sell the products of their own farms or land leased by them." Thus any farmer has a perfect right to bring to town and sell to whom he pleases, chickens, eggs, vegetables or any other product of his labor. It is said that the merchants at the small towns and cross roads throughout the county have fostered and spread the erroneous impression among the farmers for their own selfish ends. He (the country merchant) of course would like to have a corner on all the county produce and his business in that line is perceptably growing People of Springfield who especially at this time of the year count on being supplied with the toothsome spring chicken by their country friends are complaining. The county is full of chickens, yet the town is almots in the throes of a chicken and butter and egg famine

RUMORS—There are several rumors and reports of changes and a general shakeup among the town's business firms but in the absence of any definite moves as yet we can only give the rumors. Two old established firms are said to be contemplating closing out and retiring and a shake up among the employees and a reduction in expenses has already been inaugurated. Two popular young men of the town with some business experience are said to be figuring on organizing a new firm to handle hardware, tinware, etc.

BIG CROP—Judging from present indications Washington county will turn out the biggest corn crop of years this season. The acreage is estimated as being away above theaverage and a few more weeks of as seasonable weather as the past have been will insure an abundant yield. The large amount of corn planted this year is accounted forin two ways In the first place the high price of corn was an incentive and then the partial failure of the wheat crop help to increase the number of corn fields many farmers plowing up their wheat fields this spring and planting them in corn

PRODIGAL — Springfield evidently posesses a peculiar fascination and strong ties for those of her sons who at intervals are wont to shake the soil of the town from their feet and to strike out for other fields. For, as a rule, they, like the prodigal son come back and the town receives them gladly enough if not to the extent of doing the fatted calf act. We have recently had several cases in point. These have been doing well while away but having been convinced that they can do just as well and enjoy life much better in their native town, have returned and are given the glad hand of welcome

A Gentle Hint

Here is the way a country editor gets after his subscribers: "Darling delinquents! Our precious subscribers in arrears! Do you think we have sold out and gone west with the grasshoppers! No, no, little sugar lump, we could not get away if we wanted to. We are still at the old staud dishing out the paper on sweet promises and bright expectations These make an excellent diet, darling, with a little wind pudding, flavored with a word of encourgement to serve as a desert.

"We are waiting and watching for thee, turtle dove. We long to hear the sound of thy gentle footstep and hear the silvery ring of thy happy voice within our lonely sanctum.

"Dear one, we feel unusually sad and lonely tonight without you. We sigh for one glance of your eye and even half you owe us. Don't see how you can do without us. Don't see how we can possibly live without you, dear. Now, pie-crust, will you come? Do we hear you answer, in a voice sweet and beguiling, 'I'm coming' or is it only the wailing winds that 'round our sanctum roar?"

Superior Team

The game of base ball between the Springfield team and a team of our boys was commenced here Thursday afternoon. with Mr. John B. Spalding as umpire. The visitors were not equal to the emergency and at the end of the fifth inning were receiving defeat at the rate of eight to three. Seeing that they had no chance to win, Springfield's pitcher took issue against a decision by the umpire and left the diamond. He seemed to be the "whole thing," as the other players followed like a lot of sheep when their leader breaks his confines. We hope our boys will never show a hand like this should they meet a superior team.—Lebanon Falcon.

The Falcon will please take note that Lebanon's "superior" team came over here on Wednesday and were beaten by the home boys in a fair contest with no row and trouble over the umpire.

"I have taken one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for indigestion and liver complaint," writes Mr. C. M. Wilson, of Yadkin College, Davidson Co., N. C. "Have had no bad spells since I commenced taking your medicine—in fact, have not felt like the same man. Before I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I could get eat anything without awful distress, but now I can eat anything I wish without having unpleasant feelings."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse and regulate the bowels.

OF GREAT BENEFIT

Is the Free Rural Delivery System to the Farmers of the County.

Appropos of the establishing of free rural mail delivery in this county, the opinion of one well posted on the subject of the rural mail system is given below. Mr. A. W. Machen, General Superintendant Free Delivery Department United States Postal Service has an article in Success recently in which he tells of the great benefit of the service to the farmers. He says: Of all the institutions that promote the progress of the United States, there is no other to my mind that compares in importance with free rural mail delivery. Although it is scarcely five years since the system was adopted, it has already revolutionized social business and economic conditions in territory covering more that one hundred thousand square miles. Its popularity is increasing at a rate exceeding that attending any improvement heretofore attempted in the post-office service and it means more in the way of personal happiness and public advancement than anything else of which I know. This may seem an extravagant statement to dwellers in cities, who are not in touch with these things, but by men in the postal service who know, and by people affected in rural communities the statement will be accepted as very moderate We have a farmer population of twenty million people. To all these, rural free delivery is one of the greatest boons ever vouchsafed It places them in touch with the outside world keeps them informed on current events, causes improvements in roads, enhances the value of farms and farm products and takes from farm life the monotony and isolation which are so largly responsible for the desertion of the farm by young men who seek the excitement of large cities.

For the first time in history, many farmers are now in a position to get their daily papers. This means that they are in close touch with the market reports so that they are enabled to dispose of the products of their farms under the most favorable conditions. A member of congress recently told me that free delivery was worth a thousand dollars a day to every conntry in his district

SaVed a womans Life

To have given up would have meant death to Mrs. Lois Cragg of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. 'Often she writes, "I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption and was completely cured. Sufferers from Coughs, Colds, Lung and throat troubles need this grand remndy for it never disappoints Cure is guarabteed by C. J Haydon drug store. Price 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free.

NoTaige Claims

The proprietors of Foleys Honey and Tar do not adaertife this as a sure cure for consumption, They do not claim it will cure this dread complaint in advanced cases, but do positively assert i. will cure in the earlier stages and never fails to give comfort and relief in the worst cases. Foleys Honey and Tar is without doubt the greatest throat and lung remedy. Refuse substitutes, Sold by C. J. Haydon

Acts Immedfately

Colds are sometimes more trouble some in summer than in winter, its so hard to keep from adding to them while cooling off after exercise. One Minute Cough Cure cures at once. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup and throat and lung troubles.

Knott a Beneficiary.

The Washington City Correspondent of the Lexington Herald says: Under the terms of the will of the late Adolph Sutro, of California, which has been going through a contest in the San Francisco courts for the last four years, former Congressman Proctor Knott, of Kentucky, receives $3,000. Thirty years ago Sutro secured the passage of a bill giving him the right of way to construct a tunnel to the Comstock Lode." Lyons county Nevada, and authorizing him to purchase the necessary land. Sutro amassed a fortune estimated at several million dollars His will remembers twenty members of Congress serving the house and Senate at that time, and provides for the payment to their heirs should the members be deceased, which is the case in all but a few instances. Among other beneficiaries were Proctor Knott and "Pig Iron" Kelly of Pennsylvania.

CAUTION!

This is not a gentle word but when you think how liable you are not to purchase for 75 cents the only remedy universally and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1868 for the cure and treatment of consumption and Throat and Lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Boschee's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remidies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds perhaps, but for severe Coughs Bronchitis, Croup and especially for Consumption where there is difficult expectoration and cough ing during the nights and morning, there is nothing like German Syrup. Sold by all druggists in the civilized world.

Poisoning The system

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities, Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dullness and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitts Little Early Risers preyent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy healthy action of the bowels, These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress, Haydon & Robertson.

Small Cyclone.

About ten o'clock Wednesday night Lancaster was visited by the heaviest wind storm known in the history of the city. Great damage was also done in the Bryantsville neighborhood. Wheat was scattered in every direction and a building on Strother Yeager's farm was demolished.

A Lancaster dispatch to the Evening Post says: "On the road to Crab Orchard a dozen farm houses were blown to pieces and fences and trees and wheat were crried away. The iron bridge across Gilbert's creek was blown several yards. The $20,000 residence of Mrs. Joshua Daniels is badly injured, being unroofed and one wall is down. The residence of James Dalton was carried twenty five yards, himself and family therein The following are injured. Grace Dunn, colo red broken knee: an unknown colored man, broken thigh: David Thompson, face cut and bruised; two children of the Rev. Parsons injured, one fatally.

Nelson Notes.

From the Record.

Miss Jennie Maud Pash twenty two years of age, died of typhoid fever Thursday morning at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Pash of Samuels. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. James Lewis at Stoner's Chapel this morning at ten o'clock.

Deceased was a most estimable young lady, and was well known in this city where she formerly attended the Nelson Normal High School.

Yesterday afternoon, while coming in the Springfield pike, a horse driven by Willie Hart became unmanagable and ran away Mr. M. L. Smith, a travelling man who was in the buggy jumped from the vehicle and was painfully bruised but not otherwise injured. Hart continued his efforts to control the frightened animal until the buggy struck a telephone post and he was thrown out. The bones of his wrist were broken and he was severly bruised by the hard fall. The buggy was badly wrecked.

Vacation days

Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors, There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports, No remedy is equal to DeWitts Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. Prize Fake Story.

Of all fake stories invented by correspondents to city papers the following from Litenfield in Tuesday's Courier Journal takes the cake: On John Holmes farm in the eastern part of Breckenridge county, there is a circular cave where ice remains all summer Years ago, before ice was manufactured people would come miles to procure ice for the sick. Great icicles form during the winter and so large is this frozen mass that the heat of summer does not cause it to melt. On approaching close to the mouth of the cave on a hot mid-summer day one is met by an Arctic draft that chills to the marrow, So great is the difference of temperature that it is dangerous to remain long in the cave.

A Summer Trip Unsurpassed on the Continent.

The trip to Salt Lake City or to the Pacific coast via that point over the Denver & Rio Grande and the Rio Grande Western is the most beautiful in America. No European trip of equal length can compare with it in grandeur of scenery or wealth of novel interest. Then Salt Lake City itself is a most quaint and picturesque place and well worth the journey. Its Morman temples, tabernacle, tithing offices, and church institutions, its hot sulpher springs within the city limits: its delightful temperature, sunny climate and its Great Salt Lake—deader and denser than the Red Sea in Palestine—are but a few features of Salt Lake City's countless attractions There are parks, drives canons, and beautiful outlying mountains and lake resorts. Imagine if, you can a bath in salt water a mile above sea level, and in water in which you cannot sink. Inquire of your nearest ticket agent for low tourist rates to Salt Lake City or write for information and copy of "Salt Lake City, the city of the Saints" to S. K. Hooper, general passenger agent, Denver Colorado.

For Circuit Clerk.

We are authorized to announce the name of

as a candidate for the office of Clerk of the Washington Circuit Court subject to the action of the Democratic party.

The fifty seventh Congress just adjourned will go down in history among the billion dollar congresses. Just before the Senate adjourned Senator Allison presented a statement showing, from his standpoint, that the total appropriations for the session were $800,193,837. Pensions led with $139,842,220 and post-offices are next with $138,416,598. The total last year was $730,338,575. Representative Livingston, in the house stated that Senator Allison's total should be increased $295,373,215 to include contracts authorized to be entered into. This aggregate would be $1,059,577,052.

King Edward is rapidly improving from his dangerous illness which caused the postponement of the coronation ceremonies. No date has yet been set for the coronation but if the King continues to improve the event will likely take place within a few weeks.

The first of July was dividend day in New York and the total amount paid out was 125 millions. Of this John D. Rockefeller got three millions for his share and W. K. Vanderbilt and J. P. Morgan only two million each.

The Executive Committee has signed a contract with Weber's famous Cincinnati Band at a high figure, and during the week of the Fair Two concerts will be rendered each day. This will be one of the great features of the Fair.

An agreement has just been reached with the railroads and it is officially announced that there will be a half fare from all points in Kentucky as well as a special rate from Tennessee and Southern Indiana points. The each railroad ticket will be attached an admission ticket to the Fair.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., in past 81 years of age, yet he Have spent an enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. I have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. Began using Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

A SLEEPING PREMIER.

Stories of Lord North's Drowsy Moments in Parliament.

Lord North was the sleeping parliamentarian of the eighteenth century. He was forever yawning in the faces of members and their speeches. Black and White says of him that indignant orators were constantly complaining of his refusal to listen to them, and he was never at a loss in objecting them to the further humiliation of a sharp retort.

"Even now in these pains the noble lord is asleep!" burst forth an angry member of the opposition, and Lord North awoke in time to murmur, "I wish I were!"

Again he said to another grumbler, "The physician should never quarrel with his own medicine."

To a speaker who impeached him of all sorts of crimes and called attention to his doing through the attack Lord North rejoined:

"It is cruel to deny me the solace enjoyed by other criminals—that of a night's rest before they meet their fate."

The best story of the sleepy premier is that connected with a peer who bored parliament with a history of shipbuilding from the time of Noah and his ark. North began doing at the mention of the ark and slept until the speaker reached the Spanish armada. Then a colleague woke him.

"Where are we now?" asked North.

"In the reign of Queen Elizabeth."

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the prime minister. "Why didn't you let me sleep a century or two more?"

Whistler's Tart Comment.

Whistler one afternoon called on a young painter of his acquaintance who did the pretty little sort of things that are popular. In the course of the conversation that followed the young artist turned to a little head he was painting and, daintily balancing a square palette by one corner between two finger tips, took a fine sable brush and as daintily began to tickle a piece of bad drawing into a "sweet expression," saying:

"A pleasant art, ours, isn't it, Jimmy?"

"Yes," was Whistler's response, "but what are you doing, Frank?"

"Oh!" said the young artist, "I am painting a replica of a little thing some one liked because, you know, I can always sell two or three of the same subject, if it's a taking one."

"Ah!" commented Whistler, "you must be a genius, Frank, and I, alas, am like the simple minded hen who, when asked to do so, protested that she could not lay the same egg twice!"

His Style of Writing.

The copy of a certain novelist is a famous sight. On more than one occasion the arrival of a batch of manuscript from this gentleman has led to trouble in the composing department.

Quite recently the novelist in question fairly eclipsed himself. His copy was indeed a puzzle.

"Confound the fellow!" growled one of the "comps." "He's enough to drive a man to drink."

"Have you never heard how he writes?" solemnly demanded a fellow sufferer.

"No," was the reply.

"Oh," continued the other, "it's simple enough. Mr. X. (the novelist) owns a rough haired terrier. When he feels like writing a story he whistles to the dog, dips his tail in the ink and plants him down on a sheet of paper. Then the novelist begins to think and tells the story as the dog writes. The brute wags his tail, and there you are!"—Tit-Bits

Why He Drew It.

"How will I remember," said Dumley, as he proudly brandished the sword, "the first time that I ever drew that one-winding blade?"

"Where did you draw it, Dumley?" inquired Featherly, "in a raffle?"

"SEVENTY-THREE"

BY NORMAN HAMPTON

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

Ralph Bawn had made out a pretty fair summer after all. Looking back to the dread with which he had regarded the season, he felt inclined to make merry over his own pessimism.

To the fellow who is working his way through college the vacation period is veritable laying time. Then it is he must lay up something for the winter season pending the arrival at college of some hopeless duba in need of coaching. Many a young chap similarly situated is grateful to secure a post as waiter at a mountain or seaside resort, but Bawn was more fortunate. A knowledge of telegraphy had given him the post of day operator at the Prospect House, and his college affiliations had secured a social standing which the ordinary member of the army of telegraphers could not hope to attain.

Bawn had been the star member of the athletic association at his "prep" school and had won an enviable reputation on the college grounds. Moreover, he had a fine, muscular figure, clear blue eyes and hair that waved just enough to create envy in the breasts of more than one young woman subject to curling irons and kindred devices.

He distributed his favors fairly until Edith Cummings arrived at the Prospect House, after which the remainder of the young women spent the time once devoted to his society in wondering what he saw in "that Cummings girl." Yet the Cummings girl was the sort to catch the fancy of any up to date man. She could ride, row, sail and play golf. A mountain climb held no terrors for her, and her erect carriage and clear, healthy complexion were but the happy reflection of the free, pure life she led.

The simplicity of her gowns and her democratic bearing deceived Bawn, who never dreamed that her father was a Chicago millionaire many times over. And, further, when she betrayed

IT WAS DAN AND LIKE HERSELF. HIS eyes flashed. Interest in telegraphy and added zest to his operator instructions, he rested himself wondering if she was searching for some method of self-support. Ralph's office was located in a cozy corner of the hotel's square entrance, and here on his private transmitter she installed telegraphy on rainy days with the same energy that she put into athletics when the sun shone. To be sure, gossips elevated their shoulders and glanced knowingly toward the handsome operator, who was a willing instructor, but Miss Cummings was gossip proof.

One afternoon she stood at the desk as he was preparing to turn it over to the night operator. Bawn was chatting by the Morse system with the operator at Boston, and as he prepared to shut off she caught the signal "Seventy-three" and pricked up her ears.

"What was that 'Seventy-three' for?" she asked as they strolled down the big hall together.

"'Seventy-three,'" he replied, "is the universal greeting. It means pretty nearly everything from 'Have a drink' to an elaborate expression of good will. You won't find it in the books, but every telegrapher knows the sign to be one of greeting and regard." Then the conversation turned to other things, and the incident was temporarily closed.

Bawn had arranged to wait till the hotel closed, but one afternoon in September there was trouble in the Bawn-Cummings federation over Mamie Felton, and Miss Cummings expressed certain opinions regarding the Felton person with rather more directness than was wholly necessary. This off her guard, she turned her attention to Bawn himself and declared it to be her belief that a man who would take a young woman out rowing at 8 o'clock and never return with her to the hotel till after 1 was hardly sincere in his protestations of affection for a third party.

Bawn offered as an explanation the fact that he was stuck on a sand bar and could not work off till after 12, but this was rejected with fine scorn, and as Edith moved away from the desk she remarked that an engagement to go rowing would be indefinitely postponed. Then, womanlike, she ran to her room and spent the rest of the afternoon in tears.

That evening she went to the boat landing alone and, selecting a light boat, set out for a solitary row. She paddled about the lake for awhile, thinking of the trips she and Ralph had enjoyed, then with a sudden determination started away from shore.

Bawn had told her that he had stuck on a sand bar at Plum island, in the center of the lake and around the point from the hotel. Edith decided that she would look at the Plum island sand bar herself and make certain that there was absolutely no foundation for Bawn's tale.

She found relief from her vexed feelings in the exercise and, setting her course for the island, she pulled lustily. She did not realize what progress she was making till she found that the boat had stopped—on the same bank!

She reversed the oars, but the momentum had carried the boat well on to the bank of mud, and her effort was without result. She removed her shoes and stockings to get out and push, but a preliminary sounding with the oar, an afterthought, proved to her that Bawn's contention had been correct and that the mud was too deep and too soft for such a proceeding.

The twilight faded into dusk, and with the darkness came a sense of utter desolation. Once a faroff whistle told of the approach of the night train, but for the rest there were only the sound of the crickets on the island and the call of an owl somewhere on the mainland. She laid her head on a seat, and for a second time that day she enjoyed a good cry.

About 10 the moon rose, silvering the lake and deepening by contrast the gloom of the shore. Area to time she could hear the regular squeak of oars in their locks, and, straining her eyes, she could just make out a familiar form. It was Bawn, and, like herself, he was alone.

He was too far off to hear her cry. She raised an oar and roughly imitated the Morse code. Bawn, amazed, recognized the strokes. It sounded to him as if some one were trying to imitate the telegraph instrument. It was his call, "R. B.—R. B.—R. B."

Curiously he searched the water. Edith stood up. Her light dress, backed by the wooded island, caught his eye. He raised his oar. Down it came upon the gunwale. He was sending the call "Seventy-three!" Then he bent to his oars and with long, steady strokes forced the boat toward the island. He approached cautiously and did not strike the bar.

"I am glad to see you realize now that I couldn't help getting home late," was his greeting. Edith's spirit was gone.

"Take me out of this horrible place, Ralph," she said, "and forgive me for being cross. I take it all back."

There was a pipe in the bottom of his boat, and he drew her a line. His back heaved as he tugged at the oars, and soon she was in clear water. He took her into his boat and, towing the other, made his way back to the landing.

What he said and her answer are not recorded, but the conversation may be imagined from their talk on the landing.

"Just one kiss," he urged as she stepped out of the boat.

"No," she answered firmly, blushing as she spoke, "but some day you may have not one, but seventy-three."

The Midshipman of Today.

The midshipman who prevents himself to most of us has a flavor of Marryat's immortal creation of Mr. Easy. In Irish parlance, where Mr. Midshipman Easy is not so familiar a sight as in England, our cousin Nelsons have sometimes a little difficulty in preserving their gravity. A bont comes to the stairs of a pier. The middy in charge is possibly more vigorously got up than usual, to impress the natives of the savage land. Biddy is looking at him. "Ho, mister sailor! Will ye sell that child?"

"In bow! Way 'nuff. Forward there! Clear the stairs! Liberty men to land!" So hails young Nelson, but Biddy will not let him have the charity of his position. "Hand me up that pretty boy wid the roses in his cheeks. 'Tis him I want to kiss. Away wid ye, brown devils! And me, Miss Katie Macarthey, attindint of this pier since George IV. was king! You won't kiss me, boy? Then you shall not kind."

Midshipman Rodney Nelson Camperdown has to submit to scenes of this kind. It is on record that one of the good breed which "Nelsons" admirals was once carried into the decks of a flagship under the arm of a negress, who objected to removing to the captain that she never did like to be paid not paid his wages. "Put me down, boy."

HE MET HIS MATCH.

The Squire Got a Dose of His Own Disagreeable Medicine.

Men, as a rule, are more indifferent and communicative concerning the ills of age than women are, but the most amiable woman can generally find a pertinent remark to make when approached impertinently on this sacred theme. "Old Squire Jones doesn't speak to me now," said a gentle faced, silver haired lady, "and I don't like him. He has excellent reasons for not wanting any conversation with me. Several months ago I was sitting in our carriage near the city hall waiting for Helen, when I saw the old squire drive up near me. He always has something unpleasant to say about old ve ages getting and wrecks we all are, so I pretended not to see him. He came nearer, however, and accosted me.

"'Isn't that you, Mrs. Brown? How d'you do, Mrs. Brown?'

"I turned around and greeted him. 'How do you do, Squire Jones?'

"'My goodness, Mrs. Brown,' the bluff old fellow went on, 'how you have broke! I never would have known you.'

"'Why, Squire Jones,' said I, 'I was just going to say the same thing to you. I never did see a man age as fast as you have. What on earth has made you fall so rapidly? I never would have known you.'

"The poor old squire shrunk down in his buggy seat and wilted. He looked half his usual size and ten years older and drove off without saying anything further. It was wicked, really, to dent the poor man such a blow, but if elderly gentlemen want to receive compliments," the silver haired lady laughingly concluded, "they must go about distributing them."—Indianapolis News.

Justified His Position.

The story is told of an electioneer in Mississippi who unsuccessfully referred to the old saying, "The office should seek the man, not the man the office." A few days afterward the speaker was noticed electioneering in old fashioned style. Being called down and asked about his assertion of a few days before that "the office should seek the man," he replied: "I still maintain my position. The office should indeed seek the man, but, sah, the man should be around when the office is looking for him."

Tree That Turns to Stone.

There is a tree that grows in Mexico called the "palo," or stone tree. It is of enormous proportions, both in circumference and height. It has a number of branches spreading out widely and carrying leaves of a yellowish green color. The wood is extremely fine and easily worked in a green state. It is not given to either warping or splitting. The most remarkable thing about it is that after being cut the wood gets gradually harder, and in the course of a few years it is absolutely petrified, whether left in the open air or buried in the ground. From this timber houses can be built that would in a few months become completely fireproof and would last as long as though built of stone.

The Hairpin In Surgery.

The hairpin as a surgical instrument is treated quite seriously by a physician who, writing in a technical journal, names fifteen different ways in which it may be used in an emergency to ease pain or even to save life. For example, it might serve as a probe, as a surgical needle, in place of a drainage tube, to remove foreign bodies, to compress a blood vessel or to close a wound.

"One hair of a woman can draw more than a hundred pair of oxen," wrote old James Howell almost three centuries ago. It may be that some of the virtue of the hair goes into the pin.

Ready to Take Hold.

"He told me it would probably be a bitter fight," said the man who had just been to see a lawyer.

"But he convinced himself of the justice of your cause," suggested his wife.

"Well, no, not right away," replied the prospective litigant. "He first convinced himself that I had money enough to make the fight."—Chicago Post.

Before the Ark.

Noah's ark is generally supposed to be the earliest ship of which we have record, but there exist paintings of Egyptian vessels immensely older than the date, 2850 B. C., usually assigned to the ark, being, indeed, probably between forty and eighty centuries old. Moreover, there are now in existence in Egypt boats which were built about the period the ark was constructed.

The semi-annual statement of the Peoples Deposit Bank, found in another column of the paper shows continued increase in the business of that institution. On June. 30 the Bank paid to the stockholders a four per cent semi annual dividend and added to its surplus two per cent out of the earnings of the past six months.

Dr. W. C. Grigsby, who left here about the first of June was married in Kansas City, Mo., at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday June 25. to Miss Lou Grigsby of Blandinville, Ill. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for Denver and will spend three months on a bridal tour of the Northwest, after which they will locate in Blandinsville, Ill.

At the last regular teacher's examination W. A. Colvin, Geo. R. Connor, Anna Jones, Emma Nunan, Nora Turner, and Kate Shaunty were granted first class certificates. Zula Lear, Adele Thompson, second class and Sallie Montgomery third class. Cecil Gibbs and Effie Smith passed creditable, examinations but not having attained the age of eighteen were not granted certificates.

Messrs. Gray and Phillips, insurance adjusters for the Kentucky and Tennessee Board of Underwriters are here this week readjusting the town with a view of giving a new and low rate of fire insurance. Everything demanded by the insurance men in regard to fire protection for the town has been done and the town is now entitled to a lower rate of insurance. These representatives promise a reduction in the rates but can't tell just what it will be.

Oliver Gribbens, a young man of the Mooreseville neighborhood was brought before Judge Litsey last Saturday on a warrant charging him with pointing a deadly weapon at another. The law and the facts were submitted and the accused was fined $50 and costs, which was paid. It seems that Gribbens was passing by the home of Mr. T. Scott Mayes a few days ago and drew a pistol and pointed it at Robert Mr. Mayes' young son. A warrant was issued and Gribbens was arrested by Constable A C. Kimball.

Messrs. John F. and Ben F. Simms sold to Charlie Burns for a Chicago firm, one hundred head, of 2oop cattle, weighing 1352 pounds at six and one half cents per pound. This was one of the finest lots of cattle in the state and sold for the highest price. A short time before this, Simms & Simms sold to the same firm 145 head of cattle weighing 1230 pounds at $6.30 per hundred Their cattle sales for June amounted to about twenty thousand dollars. These cattle were bought in Washington county last summer and fall.

The First National Bank of this place has just closed a very successful six month's business. Its gross earnings were over six thousand dollars which were disposed of as follows: After paying all expenses it distributed to the stockholders a 4 per cent dividend amounting to $2,000, carried to tax fund $1295 which provides for all taxes for the year. Also a fund of over $500 to pay for improvements on bank building and for furniture, fixtures, besides adding $360 to profit and loss account, which makes their surplus and individual profits $15,200.

County Attorney T. S Mayes has received a program and invitation to attend the Second Annual Meeting of the Kentucky County Attorney's Associationat Estill Springs July 9th and says that he will be present. A very interesting program to last three days has been arranged and many matters pertaining to county government and other questions such as road and taxation problems will come up for discussion. The meeting is not confined exclusively to county attorneys but anyone who may be interested in such questions as will be discussed is cordially invited to attend.

Pete Livers was arrested this morning at his home on Mill Creek, by Jailer Rody and Coroner Warren on a warrant from Washington county, charging him with assault and battery. The officers left town about one o'clock this morning and drove to his house and were informed that he was not at home. A search was instituted and Livers was found hid under a bed. He was brought to town and placed in jail He will be taken to Washington county for trial.—Nelson Record.

Livers was indicted by the grand jury of this county in October, 1900 charged with assaulting and cutting Maniel Holbert, but has avoided arrest until now. He has not yet been brought to to this place

Tragedy in Mercer.

A special from Harrodsburg gives the following account of a tragedy in Mercer: George Elliot sixty-five years old, father of five married and two single children and owner of a farm worth $5000 near Dixville in this county hanged himself in his barn with a plow line this morning. After breakfast he started to visit a neighbor in a buggy with his wife. When near the house the family heard the voice of a woman crying piteously. Elliot drove on to the house and told the Williams family that he believed the horse had kicked his wife to death.

Several of the Williams family went with Elliot and found his wife lying in the highway, covered with blood and badly bruised On each side of her head were two large gashes through which her fractured skull could be seen Her face was swollen to such an extent that her eyes were almost invisible. Her physicians say her wounds will prove fatal.

Elliot assisted in lifting her in to the buggy and in carrying her into the Williams home after which he drove away.

An hour later neighbors found Elliot hanging to a rafter in his barn He was known to have attacks of temporary insanity and his wife was often afraid of him About four months ago she left him and brought suit for divorce, but after two months separation they came together again and to all appearances were congenial.

Coroner R. B. Gibbs returned to night from Dixville where he held an inquest over the body of the suicide. The verdict was that Elliot came to his death by his own hand. Mrs Elliot is still alive but unconscious. Mr. Elliot came here from Washington county many years ago and prospered as a farmer near the voting precinct of Dixville."

Elliot has two brothers living in this county, John and Dick Elliot of Jensenton. His home was in Mercer county only five miles from Mackville. He is well known at that place and people there think he was undoubtedly crazy and murdered his wife.

May Bring Suit

Mrs. Nettie Miles of Samuels, mother of Mrs A W Shermen, Jr will probably file suit for damages against the Western Union Telegraph Company for failing to deliver a message promptly. It is alleged that on the morning her daughter, Miss Murna and Mr. A. W Sherman Jr, eloped to Clarksville, Tenn and were married, a telegram was received at the Deatsville office from her son in law, Mr. Burks of Loretto, stating that her daughter had boarded the train at that place with the intention of meeting Mr. Sherman at Lebanon Junction and that it was their intention to elope. It is also alleged that the message was received in time for Mrs. Miles to telegraph ahead and intercept the young couple but that it was not delivered until it was too late to prevent the marriage. It is understood that attorneys have been engaged and that the suit will be filed in a few days.—Nelson Record.

WHY RUSSIA IS DISTURBED

These are troublous times in the dominions of the czar. Outbreaks against an established order of things are enumerous and are becoming more and more frequent. They are assuming new forms and involving new factors and offering new menaces to the system which since the days of Peter has held the Muscovite millions in an iron grip.

Not only are the students and educated folks concerned in the revolution tested. This finally led to riots in St. Petersburg and Moscow, when many were killed. The peasantry, from whom many of the students spring, sympathize with the latter and resent what they regard as the persecution of the government.

Russia has made great progress during the last decade or two. It has developed wonderfully along economical lines, and this development is bound to find its reflection in politics. People have better chances of hearing what is going on in other lands nowadays. Try as the government will, it cannot keep the population from contact with the current of life in the civilized world at large. All this has the effect of widening the horizon of the lower classes and opening their eyes to the fact that they are living under a regime which in other places has long since been disary movement which is spreading in the southern districts of the empire in Europe, but the industrial population and even the peasants are rising in fury against existing conditions. Recently, it is reported, 18,000 peasants in Poltava and Kharkov areole in their might and sacked eighty estates. The army, too, is said to be infected with the growing spirit of freedom and can no longer be depended on. Some of the Cossacks not long ago refused to obey orders against a mob, and it is said they had been at the point of revolt against M. Sipiagrine, the minister of the interior, before he was murdered.

Meanwhile rulnors of administrative reform come from St. Petersburg, and it is even said, with a persistency that gives it special emphasis, that the czar himself, alarmed over the present state of affairs, will shortly issue a rescript giving Russia a constitution similar to the scheme for administrative reform drawn up by the late General Loris Melikoff when he was minister of the interior and which was sanctioned by the late Czar Alexander II.

The revolutionary movement is headed by a compact organization known as the Social Democracy of Russia. Its programme is practically that of every Socialist party in Europe. This organization is not to be confounded with the anarchists, as the Socialists claim there is not an anarchist in their ranks. The anarchists are opposed to government in any form. They are opposed to parliaments, voting and what they call majority rule, whereas these are things the Socialists are fighting for. The Socialist system of universal cooperation, based on the principle of representative government, is their goal, but for the present they want those popular institutions which all civilized nations in the world enjoy as a matter of course.

Various causes tend to contribute to the unrest which, existing in Russia for many years, has now assumed an acute and serious phase. In the first place the ascendancy of the country in all subtle ingredients governing the entire legislative, executive and judicial powers of which are united in the czar, whose will is law.

The administration of the empire is intrusted to four great boards or councils, possessing separate functions, but each controlled by and supposed to be in touch with the sovereign. These are the council of state, the ruling senate, the holy synod and the committee of ministers. For many years this system of administration has been unpopular with the masses, who, taught by German Socialists and other foreign agitators that their manhood rights were trampled upon and that they are just as much serfs now as before emancipation, have organized to a certain extent in a demand for not only a more liberal administration of local affairs, but for a national administration based upon the constitutions of such limited monarchies as Prussia and England.

These are the political causes for the existing discontent in Russia. The economic causes are also many. For at least five years the harvests in Russia have been poor, and last year and in 1900 the prevailing drought almost ruined the crops in the southeastern provinces and in those across the Caucasian mountains. The result was destitution almost approaching a famine. To relieve the needs of the peasantry the minister of the interior was given an appropriation from the imperial exchequer. The distribution of relief was placed in the hands of parochial officials, and it was asserted that instead of relieving the needy these officials appropriated most of the money to their own use.

Another cause of popular discontent was the treatment of the students in the universities. They were called upon to do military duty, and, as this interfered with their studies, they resented. Still more important is the experience which the masses get with the police in their efforts to better wages and more humane treatment at the hands of their employers.

The most significant feature of the situation is the open sympathy which hundreds of army officers evince for the new movement. Without assistance from this quarter, at least passive it be even said, with a persistency that gives it special emphasis, that the czar himself, alarmed over the present state of affairs, will shortly issue a rescript giving Russia a constitution similar to the scheme for administrative reform drawn up by the late General Loris Melikoff when he was minister of the interior and which was sanctioned by the late Czar Alexander II.

COUNT LAMSDORFF.

and moral, little could be accomplished toward the desired end. With the moral, if not the active, support of the army anything is possible in the way of political reform.

Most of the strength of the Socialist organization is concentrated in the cities, being mainly embodied in the factory population, while the peasantry as for the most part too ignorant to appreciate the meaning of the agitation, except in a crude way. As the army is largely made up of this element of the population there would be little hope for the movement were it not for the fact that they are in constant contact with the Socialists. The thing is in the air, so that the soldiers, more especially the officers, imbibe the idea from the very atmosphere that surrounds them.

The underground press of the new party is also very active. Several of the larger factory towns print revolutionary papers. The police strain every nerve to discover the printing offices and occasionally succeed. In almost every case, however, a new establishment takes the place of the one detected within a few days after the raid. The leading underground organ is called The Spark and has been coming out regularly for several months.

Thus it is that there are many causes for the spirit of revolution now abroad in the czar's dominions.

An Idol With Diamond Eyes.

It is a curious fact and one scarcely known outside of Russia, and there hardly ever mentioned, that the famous Orloff diamond was once the right eye of the great idol Serringham in the temple of Brahma. This precious gem was stolen at about the beginning of the eighteenth century by a French soldier who had made a pretense of being converted to the Hindoo religion in order to gain the confidence of the priests and admission to the temple. The Frenchman first sold the diamond for £2,000. On the next turn it was bought by a banker of Constantinople for £12,000. The banker kept it until 1774 and then sold it to the Russian empress for £90,000 and a life pension. The gem has been in the Russian royal family ever since. As it is now set in the imperial scepter of Russia it presents a flattened, rose cut surface and weighs exactly 194½ carats.

Vanity Tickled.

During the early excesses of the French revolution a rabble of men and women were rioting in the streets of Paris. Lafayette appeared and ordered a young artillery officer to open fire upon them with two cannon. The officer begged the general to let him try first to persuade them to withdraw.

"It is useless to appeal to their reason," said the general.

"Certainly," answered the officer. "and it is not to their reason, but to their vanity, I would appeal."

The officer rode up to the front of the mob, doffed his cocked hat, pointed to the guns and said:

"Gentlemen will have the kindness to retire, for I am ordered to shoot down the rabble."

The street was cleared at once, for none could brook the idea of being classed with the scum of the city.

Why He Wasn't Impressed.

The following story is told of a gardener victim of the Johnstown flood of 1889, who when he reached paradise ascended a cloud that served within the pearly gates as a rostrum and undertook to thrill his new made acquaintances among the shades with an account of the disaster through which he had passed. He was interrupted by a gray bearded old man in the group—"A mere bucketful as mere bucketful!" the old fellow piped. "Don't waste so much time talking of a small affair like that!"

The Johnstown man resented this and hunted up St. Peter, of whom he asked, "Who is that old codger who seems to think our flood such a trifling matter?"

"That?" said St. Peter. "Why, that's Noah!"

A Church In Wales.

Wrexham parish church is known as one of the seven wonders of Wales. It dates as a structure from the fifteenth century and is cathedral-like in its proportions. A "chained" Bible, now kept under lock and key, is among the curiosities, and beside it is a handsomely bound "visitors' book," sent by the students of Yale university, United States, for the use of Yale students visiting the church. In the churchyard is the tombstone of Elihu Yale, with its quaint epitaph. The soldiers' chapel, which is entered through an exquisite arch, has a beautiful memorial window to the Welsh fusileers who have fallen in battle.

Won't Stay Retained.

This notice appears on a Flushing steamboat: "Passengers should obtain a receipt for all provisions taken on board this boat and are requested to retain the same."

Easier said than done! It reminds us of the old Limerick:

There was a young man of Ostend
Who said he'd hold out till the end,
But when half way over
From Ostend to Dover
He did what he didn't intend.

—London Globe.

To Show It.

Bingo Binks—I'm going to bring my wife round to call on you tonight.

Winterby—That's right; but do me a favor, old man. Don't let her wear her new dress. I don't want my wife to see it just now.

Bingo (grimly)—Why, that's what we are coming for.

Encouragement.

"Miss Birdie," stammered the young man, "I—I feel that I can no longer disguise the sentiments that I—you must have noticed my preference for your society—and—have I said too much, Miss Birdie?"

"Not yet, Mr. Bashful," replied Miss Flypee encouragingly.—Chicago Tribune.

Hated Rivals.

Karper—Well, I'd like to know what's the difference between a "shopgirl" and "a saleslady" anyway?

Harper—I give it up, but the differences between salesladies are sometimes fierce.—Philadelphia Press.

Roman Architecture.

In architecture the Romans imitated the Greeks and imitated them without appreciating the simplicity of grandeur. They introduced circles and segments of circles in place of the simple, restful lines coursing horizontally around the building. They raised columns which supported nothing simply for the sake of ornament; the dome behind the pediment took away its significance and removed from it the idea of pressure; they adopted the semicircular arch, which broke the entablature and the idea of solidity and thus destroyed the fundamental idea of the Greek—simplicity without subjugating any of their art.

When the Roman style was removed to Constantinople, the Byzantines revelled in domes and cupolas, but without discovering the real object of the arch. The circular arch disclosed the weight of the wall. They refused it the proper office, made it an ornament and concealed the real support of the weight; consequently in the Byzantine style we have the domes and cupolas representing the weight with no visible support and arches multiplied at caprice and with nothing to support.—London Tablet.

He Reasoned Wrong.

"It's all knowing how to reason," said the Pittsburg man as he sighed in a sorrowful way.

"I owned a house and lot in a town in our state and was getting a good rent for them when a congregation built a church right on the line. I reasoned it out that the place was spoiled, and when I was offered three-fifths of its former value I made haste to close the deal. I patted myself on the back over that bit of good luck."

"And wasn't it good luck?"

"Not a bit of it. I'm a clean thousand dollars out of pocket for reasoning blind end to. The chap who bought my place had twin babies, a piano, a fiddle and a barking dog, and the congregation hadn't occupied that church over four Sundays when it raised a purse and bought him out for twice the value of the place."—Boston Globe.

The Orang Outang.

It is a most interesting sight to watch an orang outang make its way through the jungle. It walks slowly along the larger branches in a semicrect attitude, this being apparently caused by the length of its arms and the shortness of its legs. It invariably selects those branches which intermingle with those of a neighboring tree, on opposite sides of which it stretches out its long arms, and, grasping the boughs opposite, seems first to shake them as if to test their strength, and then deliberately swings itself across to the next branch, which it walks along as before. It does not jump or spring as a monkey does, and never appears to hurry itself unless some real danger presents. Yet in spite of its apparently slow movements it gets along far quicker than a person running through the forest beneath.

A Stroke of Business.

A writer who was very intimate with Frank R. Stockton says that when the Stockton family lived in Bucks county, Pa., Frank and his brother had a dog which they trained solely to hunt cats. The brothers were overhauled one day by a farmer whose cat they were chasing. To their surprise the farmer gave him a dollar for a pig, which they took home. By driving away their father's pigs at feeding time they soon made their every interest pig in the pen and sold him at a profit of $7. Frank R. Stockton always considered the deal a tribute to his business acumen.

His Lawyer's Fees.

A London workman, having had a sum of money left him by the death of his father, went to see his solicitor, who had the matter in hand for a final settlement.

The bill of costs having been presented to him, the man glanced over the figures and, thinking the charges were excessively heavy, turned to his legal adviser and exclaimed in astonishment:

"Ma father left his money to me, not to ye!"—Pearson's Weekly.

How He Walked.

A sergeant drill instructor was endeavoring to make clear to the recruits he was drilling the meaning of the word "smartly."

"He walked across the square in the manner the word indicates. "Now, men, tell me how I walk?"

One raw recruit almost paralyzed the sergeant by replying:

"Bowlegged, sergeant."—Regiment.

How It Happened.

Customer—Look here! You said that horse you sold me was fast.

Dealer—No; I'didn't.

"You said many men drove the horse to Slopbury, twenty miles, and you went by train, and the horse got there before you did."

"Yes, but I didn't start till two days after."

Two Cigars For a Quarter.

Hoax—What do you mean by giving the cigar like this? What did you pay for it?

Hoax—Two for a quarter.

Hoax—I'll bet you kept the twenty cent one.—Philadelphia Record.

Knew Where He Got It.

Doctor (thoughtfully)—I fear you have some sort of poison in your system.

Patient—Shouldn't wonder. What was that last stuff you gave me?

The longer a man argues to make a woman see the reason of a thing the surer she is to think her instinct about it.—New York Press.

Mugging John.

"John," she said softly, "have you been saying anything about me to mother lately?"

"No," replied John. "Why do you ask?"

"Because she said this morning that she believed you were on the eve of proposing to me. Now, I do not wish you to speak to mother when you have anything of that kind to say. Speak to me, and I'll manage the business with mother."

And John said he would.

The Rib.

The Living Church quotes this from a Connecticut woman's diary, dated 1700: "We had roast pork for dinner, and Dr. S. who carved, held up a rib on his fork and said, 'Here, ladies, is what Mother Eve was made of.' 'Yes,' said Sister Patty, 'and it's from very much the same kind of critter.'"
